Growing up in the streets can be a challenge in itself. But for Brooklyn's own Kanika, the streets were her playground. She had more than most, a load of money, the best designer clothes, and all the clout that came with having a mother that made sure she had everything she wanted and powerful crime lord (Tony) for a stepfather. More than anything, Kanika wanted Tyrell, Tony's second in command.

Tyrell, having been warned by Tony about stepping to Kanika, fought off her every advance, at least until her 18th birthday. Once he got a taste, he wanted her all to himself and vowed to keep it that way. A series of events separated Kanika and Tyrell and in time each is faced with situations that challenge their love and dedication.

I must admit after reading the first few pages of this book, I had to do a double take at the title thinking I may have read it before. Shortly after, I realized this book stood alone as Ms. Edwards added some very nice twists in this great story. The sex was hot; the characters were unpredictable and most of all they were dangerous. I'm looking forward to the next novel from this author.
