After working closely with Charlie "Hill" Hilton at the Lakeland Mental Hospital, Abby Westin didn't agree with his initial diagnosis of Schizoaffective Disorder. She was sure the gibberish he wrote in his diary meant something and she was determined to find out what. With diary in tow, she headed out to consult his friend Mitch "Jacks" Jackson. Little did she know the diary held the key to things that were never meant to be unveiled, and someone was determined to keep it that way.

Soon Abby and Jacks find themselves in a race against time to save their friend Hill. Their attraction to each other takes a back seat when danger and emotions run high. This mystery will keep you going until the very end.

I found myself trying to figure things out, but Cynthia Boris kept me guessing. She did a wonderful job with bringing her characters to life and gave vivid, detailed descriptions. You will love Night Light from the very beginning. I recommend this book to anyone looking for a well written storyline.
